Coventry's Glass Bridge rises in a spiral up and over a medieval city wall and across the restored Lady Herbert Garden before arriving in the Garden of International Friendship. The bridge takes its name from the glass fins which envelope the parapets.

Through inspired leadership and innovative approaches to regeneration, Coventry continues to deliver transformational change in challenging times.

The £9 billion investment in the city continues apace with work starting on the refurbishment of the former City College building, completion of the Lyons Park road infrastructure, the securing of planning approval for redevelopment of a large part of the southern City centre, proposals for a new square at Broadgate, and new public realm works as part of the Jerde masterplan.

And the City's confidence in its future is reflected in achievements such as the securing of the Ricoh Arena as one of only five stadia outside London to be used for the 2012 Olympic Games, the relocation of Severn Trent's head office to new bespoke premises, the regeneration of the Royal Mail sorting office as a major retail opportunity and the increasing profile of the City as a centre of excellence for the development of green transport initiatives supported by the likes of Jaguar and Tata.
