

University of Salford
A Greater Manchester University

The University of Salford – at the heart of the city’s regeneration

Delivering regeneration to an entire city requires a commitment at every level – business, the community and the major projects which will define its future.

The University of Salford is a driving force behind the once in a generation opportunity for Salford to become a world-leading city. Our services and dedicated professionals can make the difference in your business, your street and across the entire city.

We’re among the national leaders in delivering bespoke training for companies. Training that’s designed with business to give a recognised qualification which is tailored to the needs and flexibility of individual organisations.

We have teams of staff and students dedicated to going out and meeting the community – letting them know about the benefits of education. And we hold summer camps where local children get a taste of university life.

And we’ll be at MediaCityUK.

We’ve invested in over 100,000 square feet right next door to the BBC buildings, where our students can find work experience and our researchers can develop the future of media alongside international partners such as MIT and the BBC.
