

Creating a real sense of place

Compendium doesn't just specialise in urban renewal and regeneration. It's the reason we're here.

We're in the business of creating homes and communities that last.

Not just another housebuilder, our skills and expertise enable us to tackle the toughest jobs from beginning to end - and beyond.

Above all, we understand that building a sustainable community means planning for the long-term.

That's why Compendium, which was set up by housing regeneration specialist Riverside, and affordable housing provider Lovell, has experts in every aspect of project design, planning, consultation, development, marketing and neighbourhood management.

As well as providing high-quality new and refurbished housing, we make a lasting impact on people's lives by providing training and employment opportunities, investing in social enterprise and supporting community initiatives. We deliver the kind of support which will continue to be essential for successful urban regeneration in Tyneside and the North East.

Regenerating communities is not just about transforming what's already there - it's about building a better future.
